HOW THE INAUGURATION IMPRESSED THE FILIPINOS

Ignacio Abelino, sergeant major of the Philippine Scouts, thus described his impressions of the inauguration:

"It was grand. We never could have imagined anything like it, for we never have had any such thing in the Philip-pines. We were glad to march in the parade, because it shows that we are a part of this country and are being

"The Spaniards never treated us that way. They would not let us associate with them and kept us down. They would not allow a Filipino to get wise. If he did succeed in educating himself they killed him, as they did Dr. Rizal.

"The Spaniards made us pay taxes every month and spent the money in Spain. They made education as difficult as they could by making us pay for all our books and beating us for nothing. The United States does not do things that way. It spends the Philippine revenues in the islands and gives us free schools and free books. The teachers don't whip the children and they are glad to go to school. Under Spanish rule they used to run away and nide in the trees. If he did succeed in educating himself away.

rule they used to run away and mde in the trees.

"President Roosevelt is a nice man—a very nice man. We all like him and think he is our friend. We feel free under American rule. We want eventually to rule ourselves, like Cuba, with an American protectorate, and we feel all of the time that we are being made fit for self-government. It will take many years before we are able to rule ourselves, but we believe Mr. Roosevelt will do all he can to help us along.

"What we saw was a great lesson to us. We will tell about it when we go back home, and about it when we go back home, and about what a great country this is. Then Mr. Roosevelt will have more friends among the Filipinos."

EVERYBODY WAS OUT

The Filipino scouts, who are quartered at Fort Myer, will also be allowed a few days' time here in which to get acquainted with the sights of the Caption

The Porto Rico battalion, quartered in the tig transport Arcadia, anchored out in the Potomac, thronged ashore to see the West Pointers depart.

The black-eyed, swarthy-skinned men of the tropics were keenly interested to watch the precision and soldierly hearing of the future commanders, and were evidently full of admiration for them.

ON GENERALS' WIDOWS

Eleven members of the President's old regiment of Rough Riders called to pay their respects to Mrs. Capron, widow of Capt. Allen K. Capron, and Mrs. Fish, who were killed in the fighting before Santlago in 1898. Those who called were Messrs. Alexander, Bucklin, Gavin, Scott, Wells, Jordan, Dettemore, Sherman Bell, Daly, Llewellyn, and Marshall.

A movement has been set on foot to protest in the name of the people of the colony against the plans of the British war office and admiralty.

Take Opposite Views. It is clear that the people here and the governing authorities of the mother country look at the matter from diametrically opposite standpoints To the inhabitants of Great Britail the maintaining of garrisons in this part of the world is only justified by one consideration—the possibility of at-tack on the West Indian colonies by tack on the West Indian colonies by foreign powers.

The Government at Washington, however, has practically guaranteed the West Indies against invasion. According to the Monroe Doctrine, should any European nation attempt to seize any country or island in the New World it would be the duty of the United States to oppose and frustrate such an effort.

United States Guarantee. Consequently the problem, from the oint of view of the British, takes this

HORSEBACK

From the Jamaican standpoint the question assumes a different form. The people here do not fear foreign invasion so much as domestic disorder. The black inhabitants are likely to rise up at any time. Within ten years they have revolted five or six times, and each time there was a lot of trouble in quieting them.

But another aspect of the matter interests the United States. What is the use of the West Indies appealing to the imperial government? What can they hope to gain? Do they not see that Great Britain is indifferent.

There may be a few politicians in the mother country who feel kindly toward the West Indies, but the British people as a whole do not care the snap of a see whether the West Indies sink or With the expectation that the Presi-

Very few people are free from some form of indigestion, but scarcely two will have the same symptoms.

Some suffer most directly after eating, bloating from gas in stomach and bowels, others have heartburn or sour risings, still others have palpitation of heart, headaches, sleeplessness, pains in chest and under shoulder blades, some

House, the President got off easily. His appearance created a stir, however, among those who were at the lucky spot, and the President frequently raised his hat in acknowledgment of their salues.
